

I Love You So Much

My husband, Ken, and I leave I love you notes for each other to find. Recently, while I was at a meeting, he duct taped a paper towel to the garage door that said, “Welcome home. I missed you.”

I leave notes for him too, on his computer keyboard and bathroom mirror. The ones he leaves in my lingerie drawer I really can't talk about.

Often Ken will leave me a note with a stick figure drawn on it, the cartoonish long arms outstretched. The words, “I love you sooooo much!” are inscribed below the picture.

When I was photographing animals on Resurrection Bay I felt a puffin saying the same thing.

What Are Alaska Digital Batiks by Francine?

Batik is an art form, traditionally done on fabric using hot wax and dye, which gives the image a crackled look.

This series of photographs synthesizes my love of silk painting, digital art, and photography with my experience as an artist new to the majesty of Alaska

www.artbyfrancine.com